BEAUTY MEETS DENTISTRY

DR. MARYAM GOLSHANI, a trailblazing Marquette University alumna and the visionary force behind Hinsdale Dental Care, is redefining dental excellence. With a rich history as an adjunct professor at Northwestern University, she champions the next wave of female doctors, igniting their passion and drive. At her practice, Dr. Golshani elevates patient care to an art form, treating families across generations, and transforming ordinary dental visits into extraordinary experiences.

Powerful woman you admire most? My mother continues to be a source of admiration and pride in my personal and professional life. She was a dedicated physician, wife, and mother of three, who started her own pediatric practice here in the Western Suburbs more than 45 years ago. This was in spite of facing many barriers as a female entrepreneur in what used to be a male-dominated field. Her success left a lasting impression on me and despite sadly passing away 12 years ago, her inspiration has had a lifelong impact—one I hope to pass on to my own two daughters.

What did you dream of doing when you were younger? I always dreamed of being a dentist. Both of my parents and two older brothers are physicians, which gave me exposure to the medical field at a very early age. I have always enjoyed science, so the opportunity to combine my interest in that with my passion for art really resonated with me. I truly cannot imagine doing anything else. I am grateful to live and practice in our community and every day feels like a dream fulfilled.

Most rewarding part of what you do? By far, the most rewarding part of my practice is the personal connection and long-term relationships I have built with my patients and their families.
